EL-ARISH. - The joint Israeli-Egyptian Commission meets here. for the third and last time this morning to finalize details of the handover of this dusty Sinal town to Egyptian rule after 12 years of Egypt is still showing no signs of urgency about the need to discuss a string of civilian issues connected with the return of El-Arish. Despite a public eall hy the Israel Foreign Ministry last week to Egypt to "coordinate" the civilian issues, a meeting of Egyptian and Israeli officials in the town yesterday produced no tangible progress.

The Foreign Ministry's "normalization coordinator," Yosef Hadess, who was in El-Arish for the first time yesterday, will join in today'e military committee meeting and possibly the Egyptian side will have some answers for him on the questions of whether the 5,000 El-Arish workers who have worked in Israel until now may continue to do. so; future arrangements for exchange of currency; arrangements for severance pay to El-Arish residents after the handover; whether Cairo will agree to sell Israel fish from the Bardawil lagoon, the cultivation of El-Arishi-owned land that will remain under Israeli jurisdiction and a string of other nonmilitary matters that will srise in

Most probably, however, officials in Jerusalem believe that there will be no progress on these matters until after the cummit next Sunday, hetween Premier Menahem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar

Cabinet likely to force Weizman's participation

By ASHER WALLFISH

Jerusalem Post Reporter None of the ministers at today'e cabinet meeting is likely to approve Defence Minister Ezer Weizman'e request that he be dropped from the Israel negotiating team for the autonomy talks.

The eabinet must reach a decision today, since the talks are due to begin on Friday and further delay is out of the question.

The tension hetween Prime Minister Menahem Begin and Weizman which clouded last Thursday's meeting of the forum of 11 ministers, is not expected to re-emerge with the same intensity today.

Sources connected with both men said last night that each respects the sincerity of the other'e positions, that both were aiming at the same general objectives with regard to Judea, Samaria and Gaza, but that they differed with regard to tactics and not substance, for the most part,

Begin has several times made it plain, in conversations in his office, that he wants Weizman to stay on. The two met on Friday, as well as yesterday, on regular Defence Ministry business, and there was no evidence of strain between them, according to officials. Weizman'e position, which he is expected to reiterate this morning, is that the negotiating team chould be guided by three broad principles only, and that it should not give them clarative status at the start of the talks. These three principlee, he feels, should govern the area of manoeuvre on: strengthening existing cettlements in the areas; ensuring the eccurity of the settlements and of Israel proper; and giving a big boost to cettlement and defence in the Jordan Rift. He objects to the exproprlation of private Arah landowners, but would insist on Israel control of state lands and of water resources, without laying thie down at the start in a declaration of intent.

Secret talks between Cairo, Palestinians

He declined to eay whether the consultations included memhers of the Palestine Liberation Organiza-

Ghali said the Palestinians would participate in the talks after they estahlish administrative authority over the West Bank and Gaza.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said last week that he eees no need for any Palestinian to join the upcoming negotiations because the fate of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip will not be determined in these talks.

He said the aim of the talks is to put the Palestinians on the "right channel" for self-determination.

NRP warns it won't agree to 'diluted' autonomy plan

By SARAH HONIG Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. - If Prime Minister Menahem Begin'e autonomy plan does not win cabinet approval, the National Religious Party Executive will be convened to review its position, NRP secretary-general Danny Vermuss said yesterday.

The NRP executive originally empowered its representatives in the Knesset to vote for the peace treaty only if the party succeeded in gaining assurances from Begin regarding the nature of the West Bank and Gaza Strip autonomy plan.

Begin's Ideas on autonomy, in general, mesh with the NRP position, but if his proposals are diluted, Vermuss warned, the NRP would be mahle to agree.

The NRP Will accept 'no watered down version of the autonomy plan. One that would make possible the establishment of a Palestinian state, limit the authority of the IDF, eurtail Jewish settlement rights and endanger the eafety of settlers," Vermuss stressed.

If the NRP is unhappy with the plan evolved, Vermuse said, the party executive will be summoned into session this week, prior to the open-ing of the autonomy negotiations. NRP chairman, Interior Minister Yosef Burg, heads the government's 11-man negotiating team for the autonomy talks.

Price freeze, C-o-L boost, capital gains tax Meshel unveils package of Histadrut economic demands

Jerusalem Post Staff

TEL AVIV. - The Central Committee of the Histadrut yesterday demanded that the government refrain from initiating price hikes for several months and that it impose a capital gains tax.

Hletadrut Secretary-General Yeroham Meshel told an Israel Radio reporter last night: "We decided to present the government with operative demands regarding the taxation of capital gains, bringing inflation to a halt, stopping price hikes and giving a clear, and immediate, promise to pay a cost-ofliving increment in July."

In a second interview, with the army radio station, Meshel explained that he intended that the capital gains tax he applied solely to professional financiers and not to those people who had invested to save for their children's education or their old-age.

The secretary-general asked the government to take stock following last month'e almost nine per cent rise in the Consumer Price Index. In this situation the eabinet cannot hit the public with a five-year economic plan, he said. Meshel claimed to have data showing that the price rises, which amounted to 140 per cent since the present government was installed, were initiated by Finance Minister Ehrlich.

Meshel said he will demand that the finance minister adjust tax brackets in line with the full increase in the index and also pay workers a C-o-L Increment on July 1. The Histadrut is not satisfied with the current arrangement, which compensates workers every six months for only 70 per cent of the rise in the

Gafny charges Ehrlich plan is 'not enough'

By SHLOMO MAOZ

No decision was reached yesterday in the ongoing cabinet debate of Finance Minister Simha Ehrlich's five-year antiinflation policy proposals. The debate will continue next week. Several ministers expressed support for the Liberal Party chief's proposal, while others said the Treasury programme did not go far enough. Bank of Israel Governor Arnon Gafny offered his own economic policy proposal and said that Ehrlich's proposed IL3.3b. budget cut was not enough. The bank governor said that an ILSh. to ILSb. eut was imperative in order to avoid an inflationary spiral beyond the expected 60 per cent Ehrlich has predicted.

Construction and Abcorption Minister David Levy took objection to threats hy Liberal Party ministers to pull out of the ecalition if Ehrlich'e plan is not accepted. Levy brought his own anti-inflationary plan to the meeting yesterday. He charged that the recent announcement of the 8.7 per cent jump in the cost-of-living index "didn't surprise any housewife," and criticized the ministers for being surprised, charging that they "are cut off from reality."

Ehrlich is to reply in the Knesset today to three no-confidence motions. The Alignment, Shai and the Democratic Front for Peace and Equality bave all tabled noconfidence motions over the government's handling of the economy. Alignment chairman Shimon Peree will speak on the first motion.

During the cabinet meeting yester day, a proposal by Liberal Party minieters to vote on Ehrlich'e budget cut proposals was met with opposition from Levy, who eaid that the debate should he on the entire five-year plan Ehrlich had brought to the eabinet last week. Levy, who was supported by Health Minister Ellezer Shostak. Education Minieter Zevulun Hammer and Religious Affairs Minister Aharon Abuhatzeira, also demanded that the budget he reopened for debate.

Prime Minister Menahem Begin apparently saw that there was no way to reach a decision yesterday, so he postponed the continuation of the dehate until next Sunday's cabinet meeting.

The proposals hy Levy and Gafny asked the cahinet to go heyond Ehrlich's five-year plan. The housing minister proposed a total wage and price freeze and the Bank of Israel governor asked for a total freeze on public sector jobs. Gafny told the cabinet that Ehrlich's proposed IL3.3b, hudget cut was "not enough." He called for a cut of at least ILSh. to iLSh. He said Ehrlich's programme "is in the right direction," hut added that if tougher steps are not taken, inflation will climh past the 60 to 70 per cent currently expected." He warned that the foreign trade gap will also worsen if the government does not erack down on epending

Gafny proposed cancelling all subsidies to capital, establishing an interest rate that would prevent credit takers from benefiting from quick price rises; cancellation of the exchange and linkage insurances; and 100 per cent linkage of development and working eapital ioans to the cost-of-living index.

The Jerusalem Poet has learned that Industry, Trade, and Tourism Minister Gideon Patt, who did not speak during yesterday'e eabinet meeting, is ready to agree to the linked loans for industry but will object to linking interest rates on them.

Gafny demanded that public sector payrolls really be frozen and that competition hetween local and foreign producers be sharpened by lifting tariff barriers. He said such competition would force un-profitable production out of the market and would create a more favourable elimate for export.

Defence Minister Ezer Weizman also appeared to go beyond Ehrlich's plan, saying he was ready to cut even more of his hudget than Ehrlich bad asked for But Welzman emphasized that he was only ready for a stiffer slash if such a cut was acrose the board in all the Education Minister Hammer ealled Ehrlich'e proposed five-vear plan "a partial programme" and charged that it was full of contradictions that would cost "the economy a great deal of money."

Levy's proposal called for a total wage and price freeze, coupled with 100 per cent C-o-L payments up to the average wage paid in the market. Currently, the C-o-L is pegged at 70

Levy also proposed that, in order to bring workers into industry, overtime pay and production premiums he enbject to lese taxation. The Histadrut has been eeeking such a development for eeveral years.

Levy said that the subsidized loans issue should he reconsidered by the government, noting that, not counting housing loans, some IL25b, was granted last year in the form of subaidized loans.

Sources at the Treasury yesterday said that the ministry is ready to consider further steps, including larger hudget cuts. At this stage, however, heavier taxes are not being considered, the sources eaid. Cabinet sources said yesterday that a majority of cahinet members appear to support the Ehrlich plan and that it stood a good chance of belng approved at next week'e

Israel won't let UN examine settlement situation in areas

By DAVID LANDAU Post Diplomatic Correspondent

A three-man UN Security Council commission currently in the Middle East will not be allowed to visit the administered areas to "examine the situation relating to settlements' there, the Foreign Ministry announced in Jerusalem yesterday. Earlier, Israel'e ambassador to the UN. Yehuda Blum, informed the president of the Security Council that Israel would "not extend any form of cooperation" to the commission, because the resolution which had established it last March had already prejudged the outcome of its ty Council, the commission is to report back to the Security Council by July 1 and the council will hold a epecial cession during July 'to review the situation in light of the commission's findings."

The resolution was passed (with the U.S., Britain and Norway abstaining) following a debate on "the Israeli occupation" initiated by Jordan. It declared that "the policy and practice of Israel in establishing settlements in the Palestinian and other Arah territories occupied since 1967 have no legal validity and constitute a eerious obstacle to a comprehensive, just and lasting peace." It also "strongly deplored Israel'e failure to abide hy" previous council and assembly resolutions, and "eailed once more" on Israel to "abide scrupulously hy the 1949 Fourth Geneva Convention in the occupied Arah territories 'Including Jeruealem." It particularly stipulated that Israel was 'not to transfer parts of its own civilian population into the occupied Arah

Ambassador Blum warned during the debate that Israel would refuse to cooperate with a commission set up under these terms. This weekend Blum wrote to the Norwegian president of the Security Council that the resolution had been 'the product of'
Jordan'e and its allies' design to euhvert the ongoing peace process," and also of 'the position adopted by certain states on the basis of deliherately distorted information and interpretation of facts...

"The commission is calculated to place obstacles in the way of the only realistic and promising approach to peace...and in particular to disrupt the delicate negotiations that are about to begin," Blum wrote. "The commission's conclusions have to a large degree been determined in advance in hoth the preamhular and operative parts of the resolution in question. The government of Israel has rejected Resolution 446 in its entirety and accordingly eannot extend any form of cooperation to a commission set up under it."

Three killed as Christians clash again in Lebanon

BEIRUT. — Fighting broke out anew-yesterday between Lebanon's two largest Christian political parties. First reports from the scene said three were killed.

The flare-up occured at the town of Akoura, 50 km. northeast of Beirut, where Phalange Party peasants stormed into the area of town inhabited by landlords. The landlords belong to the National Liberal Party of former President Camille Chamoun, a police spokesman said.

The spokesman said there was a running hattle with machineguns. grenadee and armour-plcrclng rockets in the streets near the port city of Byblos.

The Lebanese Army tried but failed to move in to stop the clash. The Akoura hiow-up was the ee-eond in eight daye hetween Phalangists and National Liberals. The two sides fought pitched hattles in three residential neighbourhoods in Belrut'e Christian sector early last week. Police reported 17 from both sides were killed in last week's elashee that prompted the leadorehipe to announce an lmmediate merger of the two parties in an effort to hall the fighting. The two parties also announced their support for President Eilas Sarkis' current attempt to sot up a national union government to replace that of outgoing Premier Selim Hoss.

Yesterday, three Syrlan warplanes flew over Beirut in a display of military strength. Unidentified anti-aircraft gunners opened fire on the planes but none of them was hit. (AP, Reuter).

Marathon debate punctuated by personal attacks

Broadcasting Authority supports Lapid

By JUDY SIEGEL Jerusalem Post Reporter

After nearly five hours of charges and counterchargee of alleged political eampaigns by and against Broadcasting Authority directorgeaeral Yosef Lapid, the authority plenum voted last night to "eupport Lapid in his implementation of the decisions of the authority's board of Thirteen of the pleaum's members supported the proposal, which was submitted by former MK Mordechal Ben-Porat. Only four votes were mustered for a proposal by jouraalist Bella Almog, who called for a "grace period" for both authority ployees and the director-general. During the proposed 100-day "grace," neither side would make public attacks on the other and suggestions for better working procedures would be formulated.

The longest plenum in the authority's 14-year history was punctuated by personal attacks both on Lanid and on the various authority employeee who have been transferred or reprimanded during the director-general'e 50 days in of-fice. The latest incident to spark the attacks was Lapid'e recommendation to the eeven man board of directore not to renew the term of Mordechai Kirschenbaum, the con-

The professional subcommittee of the Jerusalem Journalists' Association yesterday demanded that Lapid hold in abeyance the decision about Kirschenbaum until Lapid consults with TV director Arnon Zuckerman and Kirscheabaum, as required by procedures agreed upon between the authority and the association.

The 20 (out of 31) pleaum members who turned up at the meeting were nearly outnumbered by TV and radio employees in attendance. The debate had to wait until the plenum approved the radio'e aew lineup of programmes for the aext six months, which had been delayed as a result of absence of a permanent radio director for aearly a year until the recent appointment of Gideon

The only issue that met with no opposition was Ben-Porat'e suggestion change the name of Israel Radio (Shiddurei Yisrael) to its pre-Broadcasting Authority name, Voice of Israel (Kol Yisrael). The pleaum approved it in five ecconds with a round of applause.

The strongest challenge to Lapid came from Almog, who asked Lapid why he wouldn't grant authority employees the eame 100-day grace period that he had asked for himself.

For years, she said, Kirschenbaum pleaded for more resources for the department and even took "protest leaves" to dramatize the problem.

Almog also praised Ya'acov Agmon as "the number one interviewer on radio." Agmon'e "Beer and Good Cheer" radio interview show was terminated by Lapid.

Pointing to Lapid'e letter of repri-mand regarding "Almost Midnight" host Yitzhak Roeh and attacks in the board of directors on TV aews director Haim Yavin, Almog said: "I'm worried about the feeling in the corridors of the authority that anyone can be next," The quick succession of such examples, she continued, points to a political trend to "get rid of anyone who doesn't speak in the voice of the government or in your (Lapid'e) voice."

At the end of the debate, which was filmed extensively by Israel TV cameras, Lapid stated that seither the "cutting off of beads nor the gagging of mouths" will he sllowed. I will run the authority as a Zionist, an Israeli, a Jew," he said. Regarding Agmon, Lapid said that

"tired" after running for five years, and that some of the people had been interviewed two or three times. As for Roch, "he didn't comply with the long-standing regulation of getting pre-authorization for hroadeasting items about the authority itself and it happened twice in two weeks. There are huadreds - eves thousands - of such letters of reprimand and their responses in the files of the authority."

Lapid did not renew Kirsehenbaum's tenure or even extend it for three months until the end of Zuckerman'e term because "I reached the conclusion that I couldn't work with him. Senior employees must be able to work in coordination with the director-general."

Earlier in the day, authority chairman Reuven Yaron, Lapid and other officials vielted Education and Culture Minister Zevulun Hammer. who congratulated Lev-Ary on his appointment. Cabinet approves 21 top foreign service appointments

Post Diplomatic Correspondent

The eabinet yesterday approved a list of 21 high-level foreign eervice appointments submitted by Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan. The list had been beld over from last week at the request of Premier Menshem Begin, who wanted more information on-some of the candidatee before approving them.

The premier received this information during the week from Foreign Ministry Director-Geaeral Yosef Clechanover in the form of blographice and professional ssessmeats. The delay had caused some anxiety in the Foreign Ministry, especially in light of press reports that Dayan bad criticized some unnamed foreign service men at last week'e cabinet meeting for their failure to eupport the Likud government's policy. These reports were subsequently denied to the Foreign Minister's staff committee. The staff members were given to understand that Begin'e request for more information was intended as just that and not as a first step towards blocking some of the appointments.

The list of appointmente approved: proved:
Meir Rosenne — ambassador to Francs (currently the foreign minister's legal aide); Shlomo Argov — ambassador to Britain (curreetly ambassador to Holland); Avraham Kidron — ambassador, to Australia (curreetly in Britain); Binyamia Katalos — ambassador to Uruguay (a Liberal Party-

Wagner extradition before Brazil court

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI). — Brazilian Attorney-General Firmino Ferreira Paz has asked the Supreme Court to extradite Gustav Franz Wagner to West Germany to stand trial for Nazi war crimes, the "Jornal Do Brasil" reported yesterday. Germany, Israel, Poland and Wagner's native Austria have requeeted Wagnar's, extradition to stand trial for allagedly killing 150,-000 Jews In the Soblbor and . Treblinks concentration eamps of Poland. The "Jornal Do Brazil" reported that the attorney-general asked the court to deny the extradition requests of all countries except Germany. Supreme Court Minister Cunha Peixoto said that the case will be heard within 15 days, the newspaper reported.

Wagner turned himself in to police on May 30, 1978, after Austrian Nazihunter Simon Wiesenthal told the government that he was hiding in Brazil. Wagner was working as a farmer outside Sao Paulo.

The attorney-general ruled out the extradition of all countries except Germany for a variety of reasons, in-cluding the fact that Israel did not exist as a state at the time of Wagner's crimes.

Military gov't can't have role in autonomy, law expert says

By DAVID LANDAU and DAVID RICHARDSON

Israel'e position that the "source of authority" for Paleetlnian autonomy will be the military government "contravenes the spirit of the Camp David agreement," in the view of Claude Klein, dean of the Hebrew University Law Faculty. Klein is a foremost authority on administrative and constitutional law.

In an interview yesterday, Prof. Klein told The Jerusalem Post that his former faculty colleague Aharon Barak had understood the "source of authority" for the autonomy to be the parties who would set it up -Israel, Egypt and Jordan. Klein said this had emerged from his conversations with Barak early on in the peace process. Barak, now a Supreme Court juctice, was e attorney-general through much of the peace negotiations and was intimately involved in them, Klein said he too believed the source of authority" should be the parties — sc far only Israel and Egypt — who would set it up by negotiation and agreement. The autonomous council would be required to act within the powers defin-ad in the agreement. If it stepped authority" would be able to overrule it. In this way, said Klein, Israel would retain a veto over the actions of the autonomy, without having recourse to the specious and unpalatable argument that the "source the it of authority" remains the military are limited in the Camp David agreement to the right to participate in negotiations over the future. Camp David, said Klein, merely limited the modalities, not the substance, of the Paleetlnlane' "legitimate rights." "It relates to the 'how,' not to the 'what.' It defines only the procedural method, not the content," he asserted.

HUULIS

Camp David did, however, give israel a veto right over the Palestinians' achievement of selfdetermination, eaid Klein, by providing for an Israeli role in the negotiations.

Klein cited instances of "personal autonomy" granted by the Austro-Hungarian emplre to minority groups at the turn of the century, and by the Republic of Estonia to Jews and other ethnic groups after World War I. However, these autonomous rights pertained only to matters of culture and education. There was no precedent, he said, for the propo mlx' of personal and adninistrative autonomy in a scheme which was specifically intended not to grant self-rule to a defined geographic region.

Klein agreed with the government's position that the West Bank-Gaza autonomy cannot incorporate the inhabitante of East Jerusalem without undermining Israel's claim to sovereignty over the city. He suggested, instead, a "eeparate autonomy" for East Jerusalem, noting that in practice l existed there already.

Solar water heaters to be mandatory Fuel saving committee urges public awareness

A one-day-a-week ban on the use of eare, weekend closing of petrol stations and adoption of summer time now appear remote as the Ministerial Committee on Fuel Conservation, meeting in Jerusalem yesterday, failed to mention these ideas as iteme to be discussed and voted upon at next week's meeting. Following yesterday's meeting —

chaired by Energy Minister Yltzhak Moda'l — the committee listed the following course of action to be brought to a vote: Publio awareness: a nationwide campaign 'of unprecedented magnitude" will be undertaken by the Energy Ministry to teach Israelis the importance of fuel economies and how to achieve them.

Responsibility: Moda'i will sponsor legislation requiring operators of all public places — office buildings. supermarkets, department stores and institutions — to hire "energy saving inspectors" who would be responsible for controlling the use of fuel in beating, cooling and lilumineting these places.

Hot water heating: The Interior Ministry will Issue regulations requiring all new installations of hot water heaters to be either solarpowered units, or typee operated by eunlight in addition to other sources of energy euch as electricity or petroleum derivatives. Shared expenses: Under the present Land Law, all flat owners in a bayit meshutaf (condominium), must contribute towards the installation and operation of any central heating and/or hot water heating system wanted by a majority of the

The Energy Ministry claims this requirement, by freeing individual flat owners from paying according to their individual needs or consumpbeating or hot water, and a concomitant fuel waste. Therefore, the Justice Minister will be asked to introduce an amendment to the Land Law, eancelling this "forced contribution" clause affecting central heating and hot water eysteme.

Rabin takes Peres to task over Labour autonomy stand

Post Political Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Another volley in the escalating Rabin-Peres feud was fired yesterday with the publication of an interview in which former prime minister Yltzhak Rabin took the policy of present Labour Party chairman Shimon Peree to task. In the interview, in the latest issue of the Labour Party 'Migvan' magazine, Rabin brands Labour'e position paper on autonomy "an artificial concoction" and condemns statements by Peres that he might, under certain conditions, enter into a dialogue with the Palestinians.

Relatione between Rabin and Peres have been more strained than ever recently. The two bave engaged in several verbal bouts, most notably when Rabin announced plans to meet with Interior Minister Yosef Burg to discuss autonomy, in splte of Peres' strong opposition. Rabin also took issue with Peres' contention that, bad the peace treaty with Egypt been concluded earlier, Israel would have had to give up less.

The attempt to seek an autonomy formula which is better than that proposed by Prime Minister Menahem Begin is futile according to Rabin. "There will not be a better plan. Begin's autonomy idea stems from a total outlook rather than a tactical move. Labour'e autonomy is an artificial concoction," Rabin cald in the interview.

Ae he sees lt. the autonomy negotiations are sure to fail in any case and, therefore, "Labour is in error when it details its weak points. foresakes its positions of principle and playe in other people's ball courts. There is no point to write whole volumes on the subject and suggest minute detalle for an autonomy plan according to the Labour school ... although Labour basically renouncee the autonomy idea, it at the same time euggests a rival autonomy scheme of its own."

Without mentioning Peres by name, Rabin expresses "Anxiety at attempts by some in Labour to accept the Yariv-Shemtov formula," whereby Israel would be ready to conduct talks with any Palestinians who would recognize it. In his Knesset speech during U.S. President Jimmy Carter's visit to the Knesset, Peres expressed readiness to negotiate with Palestinians who would recognize Israel.

'Diplomatie negotiations on the Palestinian issue ought to begin with Jordan. Only in connection with that country can the Palestinian problem be solved," Rabin sald.

IN THE YEARS before the 1941 attack on Pearl Harbour, a plan existed in Japan to enlist the skills and financial resources of persecuted Jews in Europe, to rescue them from the Nazie and to establish an 'Israei'' in Japan's conquered territory of Manchuria, in northern China.

Japanese military leaders and industrialists devised in 1934 what came to be known as the "Fugu Pian." Its initial goal was to invite 50,000 German Jews to settic in Manchukuo, as the Japanese called Manchuria. The 50,000 Jews were to serve as a vanguard for as many as a

But Rabbi Wiss reportedly offsred him no encouragement, citing Japan's militarism and mistreatment of conquered people.

Later, in June 1940, Rabbi Wise indicated to Jewish leaders in Tokyo that he might consider the pian if the U.S. Stata Department approved. But war in Europe - and growing tensions between Japan and the U.S. - ruled out such a possibility.

"BEWARE of Greeke bearing THE GREEK RUSH gifts." The Greek reputation for acumen in business and politice dates from ancient times. "Our industry will have to be cut back," he said. "Some will survive, come will do very well, but some - beavy machinary, for example — will have to go."

Other Greek interests were also allowed to suffer without many quibbies. Although official unemployment figuree are low in Greece, there is a very great deal of underemployment, which could be partly cured by Greek workers gaining full access to the labour markets of northern Europe. Yet Greece has accepted a 7-year transition period before its workers gain unrestricted freedom of movement within the

These are the two faces of Portugal five years after the April 25 revolution which brought a frail democracy, four years eince failure of the Communists to create a Cuba on the Atlantic. But the Communist spectre remains, largely because of their control of the trade unions and, particularly, of the collective farms.

Statistice in Latin countries are notoriously unreliable but there is virtual agreement that about a third of the active population works on the land. This is more than in any other country of the EEC, which Portugal has applied to join, and even more than the other two applicants countrice, Greece and Spain. Nearly half the small farmers and collective workere are lilitarate. Many are refugees from the former African coionies of Angola and Mozambique. The country is divided into two distinct farm economies by the river Tagus, which flows from the sierras of Spain into the Atlantic. North of that boundary is the minifundia, the land of the tiny farms averaging around two hectaree and two or three cows, gradually diminishing under the inheritance laws. In Portugal, unlike other Mediterranaan countries, girle inherit equally with boys but often sell their ebare to their brothers.

WOMEN do most of the work on these smallholdings. The husband works in local industry, if he is lucky enough to have a joh in a country where unamployment is endemic. Agriculture Minister Vaz Portugal says the only answer to the problam of the fragmented farm structure of the north is cooperation. Tha population here is conservative, both politically and agriculturally, but the cooperativee are beginning to win them over by recults, however poor by European standards.

South of the Tagus the problem is very different. This is the alentejo, the land of snormous estates of thousands of hectares, mainly wheat and cereals but with some cattle and pig herds, and the profitable corkoaks. It is a sun-drenched arid area where the former estate owners. often companies or absentee proprietors, spent little on irrigation or other investment.

In the first 18 months of the revolution, the land workers, led by the Communist-controlled trade unions. transformed 480 estates, 1 million hectaree, one fifth of the land of Portugal, into collectives. In typical Portuguese style, there was little violence; the estate owners were either not there to resist or, where there was resistance, the "oc--cupying forces! just went away and tried the next farm Many owners had taken action in anticipation of collectivization by seiling off farm machinery and eizughtering livestock, leaving the incoming occupiers with bankrupt and neglected holdings.

The trade unions controlling the collectivization compounded the problems by insisting that each estate take on some of the local unemployed or workers who had previously been dieplaced by new machinery.

THE RESULT is that the collectives are hopeiassly overmanned, as weii as lacking management and technical experience. The workers have benefited because their wagee have doubled, but they are literally eating the seed corn and in some cases stripping the cork-bark years in advance of ripening.

The agrarian reform, which has been a touchstone of Portuguese politics since Salazar, has notably falled. The present government's the collectivized land to former owners is meeting with political and physical resistance and little agricultural euccese. Agriculture Ministry officials and advisory officere are not admitted to the collectives, who refuse to pay rent, taxes or interest on loans and credit provided by the government.

The World Bank has made $70m available for improvement of agriculture in the alentejo, but the funds remain untouched because the government wants real agrarian reform first and does not want to prop up inefficiency and overmanaswers to obstatrics, anaecologicali, for lity and family plantage ological,

ON DRY-hot hamsin days, many plants have a tendency to droop. even though the soil is sufficiently moist. After sunset they mostly recover and look more or less normal again. But flowers sensitive to heat, like gladiolus, bellis, arctotis, calendula and others do suffer during a hamsin and fade much quicker.

 $m_{a|_{k}}$

To reduce drooping and scorching, I use my sprinkling system during the hottest part of the day, with a rosette with a capacity to give the fineet spray. It fits a rubber hose. I fixed it on a dibble-like part, which you can buy at every garden - centre. With a piece of metal pipe (half an inch in diameter), about one metre long, I easily constructed a 'wandering heat and draught reducer." I inserted the pipe into the soft ground, placed the "dibble" with the rosette on top of the pipe, connected it to the hose and opened the water tap. Immediately a fine, dew-like spray dispersed in all directions.

This arrangement reduced heat and draught. My whole garden responded invourably to this refreshment, which is not lees refreshing to human visitors in the garden. This misty spraying not only helped to overcome hamsin damage, hut also crentsd a humid ntmosphere, providing a beneficial, long-lasting effect.

Lawns re-awakened in April and are growing faster than ever. This means that from now on we must mow regularly. But don't cut tha grass down too low during the first few cuttings. Keep the grass a little higher nt first and with each subsequent mowing lower the hottom hlade of your mower until it is noproximately 12mm above the eoil.

ZINNIA (zinnia elegans in Latin or teinnia adina in Hebrew) belongs to

COOL IDEA FOR SUMMER DAYS

GARDENER'S CORNER/Walter Frankl

the hig compositor family and is a native of South America and Mexico. It is named for Johann Gottieled Zinn, an 18th century professor of medicine at Goettingen, Germany.
Sow or plant zinnias just new.

They are one of the most rapid growing summer annuals, even given the warmth and sunshine in which they revel. Their bright colours emirace almost every colour in the spectrum, except blue. When you have arremp ty flower bed in a summy spot, use it for zimias. Either buy plants from your nurseryman or prepare your own zinnia seedlings from seeds. Fill a mursery frame or a seed box with rich compost soil (1 part sand, 1 part compost, 2 parts red soil, all well mixed). The greyish-brown, papery-looking simils seeds are; large enough to be handled separate ly, co they can he used more economically and placed in the sow of ing trench one by one. Sow in rows, cm. deep and 15 cm. apart. Water daily with n watering can. Germination should not take more than 8 -10 days. Thin the growing seedlings to 5; cm. between plant. Thinning is very important, because overcrowding will produce thin weak seedlings. which will not survive transplanting.

by mid-June. Transplant them in late afternoon (and not on a hamein day) and keep the ground moist to give them a good start. Planting distance should be 40 cm. hetween plants and 80 cm, between rows.

Moss stick

There are now many hybrid zinnias on the market, varying from miniature flowered types to giants, with single or double flowers. The "liliput" zinnia is euitable for colour all summer long and in early nutumn. They should be planted with geraniums or other higher-growing flowers with dense foliage for wind protection.

The new varieties are more weather resistant and stronger. They are, therefore, much better as cut flowers than the older varieties. Zinnias are strongly inclined to mildew if watered too freely. To avoid this ugly disease, try to water zinnias either hy hose in trenches around each plant, or hy a drip system, without wetting foliage. A prophylactic light dusting with sulpha powder may avoid any trouble. Well-kept zinnias sometimes grow as high as 75 - 80 cm, but regularly they reach n height of 40 -50 cm. Always cut all faded flowers to produce sids branches with more and more colourful blooms. Sincs May-sown zinnias cometimes bicom themselves out by the end of August, it is a good idea to start a second crop about mid-June for early utumn flowers.

Vegetables. May is the most convenient time for growing corn in Israel. The homeland of swest corn is Peru, where the Inca Indians grew it some 2,000 years ago. It is still a main food crop today, grown in the hilly region of the Andes. (I visited a prosperous corn field at an altitude of more than 5,000 metres.) Around the Inca stronghold at Matchu-Pitchu terraces growing corn are filled with fertile soil brought up from the valleys. They are watered by occasional rains and by river water pumped up from springs in the Peruvian jungle. There is a story how the Indians taught the early eettlere to plant corn, burying a dead fish in each hill. Today we know the reason for this strange custom: the fish carcass contained valuable fertilizing elements.

Corn sowing, Prepare the soil, adding decomposed stable manure or compost. Make irenches 3 - 4 cm. deep and sow the seeds 10 cm. apart. Later thin out, leaving only the strongest plants, 40 - 50 cm. hetween plants. Seeds soaked 24 hours before planting germinute more quickly. For a continuous supply of corn sow every two weeks from now until July. It takes about 70 - 90 days from planting to eating.

Hybrids. American seedmen have succeeded in creating a big variety of sweet corn hybrids. Corn, in fact, was the first vegetable to hs hybridyzed. Some breeders concen-trate on swestness, others on early yield. At present, the sweetest kinds are not the earliest ones, so botanists still have far to go. Sincs corn is wind-pollinated, chort rows next to each other are npt to grow more cobs than one long row. The side sprouts (suckers) are necessary for breathing and should not be remov-ed. Harvest corn when the fibres on the cobs turn brown.

Living totem. You can easily produce a co-called moss stick and thus enjoy a percunial indoor decoration. Many house plants need some support and training to be seen at their hest. Many of these plants originate in jungles, where they grow to an unlimited height, producng side hranches and aerial roots.

When commercial explorere brought the first rubber trees (ficus clastica), philodendrons (monstera) and dsvil's ivies (scindapsus or pothos) from American and tropical jungles to Europe about a hundred years ago, professional gardeners grew them as degenerated dwarfs in flower pots. The trees, which grew 70-80 metres tall in their native haunts, in pots grew not more than 2-2 1/4 metres high. But if you provide them with optimal growing conditions, they will repay you with a multitude of healthy green loaves and some (in rare cases) will even produce flowers. One of the "optimal conditions" is the "moss skick."

How to make it? There are two waye to do this. First, insert a strong stick, about one meter long into a flower pot with the young tree. Cover the etick with ephagnum mose (available at garden centres and nurseries) and secure it with twine or soft wire. Tie the tree to the moss stick. When you water the plant, don't forget to keep the moss slightly

The aiternative is a "moss column," which is a tube of wire netting, rolled into a cylinder. A few pieces of soft wire will secure the form of the wire netting. Put the tube (about one metre iong) into the empty flower pot (after first putting a fint stone on the pot hole for drainage), half fill the pot with good garden soil, insert the young tree with its rootball intact and add more soli, according to the capacity of the flower pot. Then stuff the tube with damp moss and tie the plant to the wire netting. Finally, water tho

Both ways the plant will respond favourably and push its aerial roots into the moist moss. This wiii promote foliage growth, more sprouts, more branches and leaves and more sucking aerial roots.

FOR A CHANGE, the Israel Philharmonic Orchestrn held the premiere of one of its concert series in Jerusalem. Was this a passing wink or a nod for the future?

Hearing what the young - or fairly young - composers of other countrice have to say is alwaye interesting, and so the two works by Leonardo Balada from Spnin (himself present) proved welcome entertainment. He paid homage to two musical "grents" - Casals and Sarasate, though one wondered how they would have received the noisy

ELECTEONIC MUSIC SERIES, CONCERT No.4 (Tel Aviv Minseum, May 16). Pierre Bosswiwald — "Toçatana"; Josef Doriman — "Waves et Time"; Michel Chien - 'Bequism.'

THIS WAS the last in a series of four concerts in which composer Yltzhak Sadai, director of the Electronic Music Centre at Tel Aviv University, presented a wide range of electronic compositions.

Though this new media still ecems closed book to the ordinary listener there can be no doubt any longer that electronic music has emerged from its childhood and has reached the level of art.

As in all other fields of art, levels vary from the most trivial, to the sublime. For giving us a chance to make n closer acquaintance with this new world of music, Sadai must he highly praised. Special mention also must be made of sound engineer Don Goodman, the electronic studio'e technical director, for his labour of love. He contributed immensely to the whole undertaking. This last evening presented three works, the first heing "Tocatann" hy Pierre Boeswiwald. By juxtaposing concrete, naturalistic sounds like the ringing of the telsphone, speech, whistling, steps, etc. with abstract, electronic sounds coming from another time-space continuum, theatrical impression. While the idea seems promising, actual results do not fulfil one's expectations. The work repeats itself and there is no escape from boredom.

JOSEF DORFMAN'S 26-minute 'Waves of Time" with subtitles like Dream, Struggle, Joys, Sacrifice, Oath, Dancing and Return, is an antithesis to Boeswiwald. The piece bustles with energy and releases an uninterrupted stream of informa-

Besides an impressive display of six channels, three taperecorders, live mixing, etc., Dortman applies various techniques and compositional devices taken from conventional music — multilevelness, counterpoint (polyphony), ostinato. polyrhythm, motivic distinction, etc.

All this is most interesting and neceesitates a high degree of alerinese. But as time passes the mere quantity of information to which we are exposed inevitably lowere our attentivenese until it shuts our minds completely. At this juncture a feeling of greyness eceme to replace the experience of activity. The inevitable result is horodom. Six to eight minutes less music would have enhanced the piece greatly.

The last work, Michel Chion's "Requiem," was undoubtedly the most impressive. Indeed, it was ons of the greatest pisces of electronic music I have ever heard.

"Requiem" is an expressionistic composition par excellence, coming to us directly from the composer's personal psychological workshop. It depicts an agonizing sequence of hysteria, absentmindedness, dread, collapse, peace of mind, insanity, solace, pain and suffering. Chion's exposition of modern man's incompatible states of mind, his complete loss of human scale and on the other hand his yearning for peace and harmony (illustrated hy beautiful organ harmonies), make the piece an agonizing experience

Those who do withstand the terror are richly rewarded. The composition uses various poetically recited texts, the Latin text of the traditional Requiem, come chattering concrete sounds (vomiting or a maddening outhurst of insanity), hesides great richness of concrete and electronic sound combinations.

ISRAEL has afuch to teach America about community organization, but it has much to learn, particularly inthe development of community centres, maintains Avraham Goren, a irom of Community Centres, who has just returned from a study tour of Jewish community centres in the U.S. The America mission was sponsored by the Joint Distribution Committee and the

"In a word," Goren says, "the pressure must be exerted from the bottom to the top, and not vice versa. The director must be subordinate and accountable to the community all asgments of it, from the youth, who should be represented on our boards, all the way to the elderly in

They must be made nwere that the responsibility for the center, in-cluding its fiscal obligations, must be shouldered hy the community rather than exclusively hy the Government, JDC and the municipality."

HOW DOES one go about creating a board representing all segments of the population? "You have to seek out potential participants in the com-munity," stresses Goren. "This can be done in a number of ways: getting them involved in the activities of their child at the centre; finding out and and shielelelisticines and the more are ticulate members of the community, and getting them to participate in improving the quality of life of the community; seeking out local ding people with administrative and financial ability who are looking for outlets for their energies. For example, a man who owns a printing press can be interested in providing guidance in the preparation and publishing of the centre hulletin. From there it's a short step to getting him to join the centre's board of directors, if he sees that the board possesses the anthority to affect changes in the function and direction of the centre." As Consultant on board management to the Israel Association of Centres, Goren intends to apply the experience he gained in the U.S. to

We've mnde remarkable strides in Israel," he says. "Our centres are more like America's settlament houses at the turn of the century than centres in the contemporary American sense, and ws would like to keep them that way until we have overcome the social and cultural lags.

"If Project Renewal is to succeed though, the centres will have to play a pivotal role in improving the quality of life in their communities. It's not enough to put up new dwellings. Unless the members of the community are actively invoived in the planning and execution of the programme, the project will not get off the ground."

A CASUAL visitor to the Herzliya municipal high school gets the impression that he is entering a tough urhan sium school. Doors swing loose on their hinges, windows are broken or non-existent, and the air throbs with the sound of construction on four classrooms which should have been finished in December

According to Rivka Krollgrad, chairman of the teachers' committee, the roof leaks, the tollsis are insanitary and electricity terminals are left exposed for weeks without being repaired. "This school can no longer fulfil its function," she said. "Pupile who come here do not receive the facilities which are their right. There are classrooms here which have no doors or windows and It takee months hefore the municipality sends workers to repair them. "Meanwhile, we carry on in a situation of chronic overcrowding with the rumble of the never-ending construction work in the background. I wouldn't object if it resulted in new classrooms for the school, hut they have heen building and huilding for years and nothing is getting hullt.

THE MUNICIPAL high school is the only high school in Herzliya, serving a population of 70,000. According to Yosef Shaher, chairman of the parents' association, elmilar sized towns elsewhere in Israel have thres one to serve the fast-growing population of Herzliya for years.

First, they are asking the municipality to appoint an official with the authority and the hudgetary backing to rehabilitats the school and maks it "a fit place for our children to learn in." Second, they are demanding that work be started on a new high school.

THE PRESSURE for improvement comes not only from the parents and teachers. The pupils themselves are hecoming increasingly restive. Last Sunday, 800 of them were mobilized hy the student council to demonstrate outside the municipality building. The atmosphere began to get nasty when some of the pupils began shying eggs and tomatoes at municipal workers. According to Oded Keren, a tenth-grade activist on the student council, the demonstration could not he cxplained mcrely as a case of youthful high epirits. "We know that the education we receive here will affect our whole lives and we think that we're getting a had deal," he eaid.

Keren pointed to three examples where he thought that standards in the school had fallen helow acceptable levels. "There are only three science laboratories in the school one for physics, one for chemistry and one for hlology. All three have obsolete squipment. Even so, we're lucky that the teaching staff is willing to hold eclence classes after school hours, otherwise most of us would never get to use even that."

Keren's eecond complaint concerns the echool library. "There ic only room for about 50 people in the library. In the eummer, near exam time, it'e closed to the whole school except the top grades who are studying for their matriculation. This year, it was closed even to tham for a long time because there was no

The third complaint is the gymnasium. Keren saye that most classes can use the gymnasium only once every two months. "And again, the equipment provided is totally inadequate," he said.

YESHAYAHU Kashtan, director of the education committee, agrees that the situation is not ideal. He said that the municipality had heen pleading with the Education Ministry for years to build a new high echool in Herzliya.

Recently, the ministry finally gave its approval, but since then the government has declded on a building freeze and the position of the new school is now unclear," he said. And as far as the complainte regarding the facilities and conditions in the school are concerned, Kastan could only eay that the maximum was being done within the budgetary restrictions. "Much of the damage is a result of vandalism, which is much higher than average in this echool." The ecene ecems set for a fuliecale confrontation at the heginning of the next school year, and a prolonged pupils' strike.

Foreign airlines ired at charters from Israel

Post Travel Reporter

TEL AVIV. - A new charter war is helieved lusvitable following protests by foreign airlines operating in Israel against a recently approved plan, which would for the first time provids cheap charter flights ahroad for Israelis.

Last month Tel Aviv's Maof Tours and Travel announced that it had received approval to operate charters out of Israel through its 'Charter No. 1" subsidiary. Maof's success in getting approval from the Ministry of Transport and the civil aviation authorities touched off sharp protests from foreign carriers serving Israel.

Olympic Airlinse' rsgional manager, Ze'ev Kis, acting on behalf of the other foreign airlines, civil aviation authorities cancel, or at least euspend, their approval of Maof's Israsl-Europe charters.

The foreign carriers claim that Maof Tours will not be operating the charters according to current regulations, which call for inclusivs tours bsing a fundamental provision of any charter flights. Maof'e "Charter No. 1" flights reportedly offer "basic accommodation," which Kis claims is not suitable for Israclis. Yltzhak Gadish, managing director of Maof, claims that "Charter No. 1" operations are completsly legal and within the regulations demanded by Israel law.

Maof raports that the limited number of seats on their naw charter flights during May were sold out immediately, while seats for June and July are almost gone. With Maof now trying to provide additional space, the foreign eirlines launched their 'frontal attack."

The foreign carriers, as well as El Al, are concerned at what could be the start of an encroachment on their established routes, which they built up over years of promotion and investment. British Airways' Israel manager, John Kennedy, told The Jerusalem Post that whils he didn't oppose charters on principle, he objected to the fact that they skimmed off holiday traffic from established permanent routes.

"The charters benefit from the destination promotion of the scheduled airlines, which operate year-round. Charter flights from Israel especially are seen operative over the two or three peak eummer month

He added that the new charter flights from Israel could "result in sometblng of an avlation catastrophe, and even cause foreign airlines to cut out a route beavily penetrated by charters." Kennedy clted the example of British Alrways' daily Tri-Star flights between London and Tel Aviv, which might be reduced by one flight per week due to charter competition.

At the other end of the charter front, more and mors operators are competing with each other to bring low-cost charter flights to Israel, especially from the United Kingdom. The total to be operated this coming winter already involves 12 weekly cbarters.

Seven days and six nights in Israel are being sold at under £100 (IIA,891), which includes the twoway flight and 'basic accom-modation." In most cases 'hasic accommodation" means extremely low-cost overnight stays, either in hostels, onc-star hotels, or, most recantly, in private rooms.

Post Economic Reporter Financs Minister Simha Ehrlich plans to require an increased number of employers in wideranging areas of the economy to deduct income tax from sub-contractor payments. The plan calls for some 200 of the larger industries in the sconomy to begin deducting taxes from their salaries, which would hring an estimated IL7b. into the nation's coffers much earlier than under the present setup.

One of the major targets of the new pelicy is the diamond polishing industry, which currently employe polishers on a "sub-contracting" hasis. Under this setup taxes are not deducted at sourcs. The plan will also affect similar sub-contracting arrangements, such as those of the entertainment industry's stags hands and electricians.

Agancles renting out building equipment and passenger and parcel dslivery services will also be included under the new arrangement.

Engineers bid on future pay hikes

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Histadrutaffiliated Engineers Union announced on Friday that it will seek adjustment of tits members' : pay scheme, if clerks under the unified pay scale get a raise.

The engineers recently went on strike to upgrade their pay scale, which had lagged behind wage increases given to workers in other categories.

Watch that pension

Pensions are often only half of salary

TEL AVIV. - Tens of thousands of salaried workers will find upon retirement that their pensions are much smaller than they had always belleved. "Unless they have other financial resources, they will have to cut their standards of living drastically." says Eliyahu Ben-Amram, directorgeneral of the Gadlsh Provident Fund, who is also an assistant director-general of Bank Hapoalim.

"Pensions are generally based on 70 per cent of the last salary, if the retired person has worked 35 years. Although these pensions are linked to equivalent salaries as the years pass, most persons don't know that in many cases 70 per cent may actually be as low as 50 per cent," he says.

The reason is simple; most wage earners fail to realize that the 70 per cent is based only on their basic salary and cost-of-living allowances. In most cases a goodly portion of their pay cheque, often between 20 and 50 per cent, is composed of "extras," which are not included in the base for pension benefits.

These include (as a rule): overtime, premiums, extra pay for night shifts, "standby" pay, additional pay for working a split day, car, telephone, and clothing allowances, profeselonal literature, and a thirteenth month's salary.

"These Items often reduce the pension to 50 per cent of the last pay cheque," Ben-Amram says. Moreovar, even if this 50 per cent is a considerable figure, the income tax authorities often take a healthy hlte out of it.

The solution, be believes, is for wage-earners to take out a private pension plan, better known as joining a provident fund, on that part of their ealary not covered by regular pension schemes."

He helieves that not only will this halp supplement the pensioners' monthly incoms, but "It is also one of the best investments a person can make in this country.' For example, assuming that a person picks up about ILi00,000 a year in income from these "extras." (or additional sums from work he does outside his regular place of work —

Le., moonlighting). The income tax authorities allow him to deduct five per cent of the payments he makes to a provident fund from his income tax payments. This comes to IL5,000 a year. But in reality, when he puts aside IL5,000 a year in a provident fund, it only costs him IL2,000 a year if he is in the high income bracksts which pay 50 per cent income tax. For if he does not put this sum in a provident fund, he will have to pay IL3,000 a year (so per cent of IL5,000) in income tax

The catch, of course, is that he can't touch the money in the provident fund for 15 years, or until he reaches the age of 65, in the case of men, or 50 for women.

But an advantage that most persons don't know about is that the person joining the provident fund has complete control over it during his life and after his death. He decides who gets the money when be dies;

The money doesn't automatically go to his wife or to his children, Ben Amram says, adding with a twinkle in his eyes, "we believe we have everal men who have designated their mistresses as their beneficiaries. And svan if their wives know about this arrangement there is no legal way they can touch this moncy.

But there are sevaral other impor tant advantages. "The sum is tax, free, whether it is paid in monthly instalments, or wbether it is paid in a lump aum.

Moreover, bs believes it provides the best income available among all! saving schemes. According to his figures, huying index-linked bonds provides a "real" (not inflationary) ncome of about two per cent a year! setting asida funds in a six-year;
'savings scheme,' where your receive a 21 per cent linked bonus if you don't withdraw the funds before. the six years are up gives you i 'real" yield of about four per cent a

Moreover, all the provident funds are hased on the funds themselves buying government linked bonds. 'So the funds are just as safe as the government ltsslf."

Landowners protest tax discrimination

Ry ALAN ELSNER Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. - A delagatlon representing the Association of Landownsrs in Israel yesterday met members of the Knesset Finance Committee to complain about "tax discrimination" against them.

A representative of the association told The Jerusalem Post that 90 per cant of its members do not own land in Jerusalem. Tel Aviv or other highvalue areas.

"Most of our members own land, where building permission has been consistently refused them over the years. Why should landowners have to pay property tax, when people who possess works of art or diamonds or stocks and shares are exempt from it? We have hean singled out for special treatment and this treatment amounts to one big in sult." the representative said. He called on the Likud to honour Its election promise to abolish coperty tax once and for all.

"Far from abolishing the tax and promised, the government bas: allowed it to rise no less than three! times in the last two years. Until twoyears ago, owners of land without building permission received a 40 per cent reduction in the tax. But this was abolished in 1977, increasing the injustice which these people have to bear," he said.

PAPAL PHILATELY. Poland is to issue special postage stamps portraying Polish-born Pope John Paul II to mark his visit to his homeland next month, informed sources said, yesterday.

On Index-linked bonds mixed in active market

TEL AVIV. — In active trading on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange yesterday, index-linked bonds were volatile while shares moved

We would appear to be witnessing a return to the trend which was predominant carly last week, with equities looking much more attractive to traders than index-linked bonds. This trend, it will be recalled, was temporarily reversed in the middle of the week by the announcement of the massive rise in the April price index. However, the revival of interest in index-linked honds has not been sustained.

Yesterday, they were decidedly mixed. With 6% per cent linked bonds up by maximum jumps of 1 per cent and foreign currency bonds by as much as 1% per cent, double option bonds fell by a similar amount while 4 per cent linked bonds dropped by 1/2 per cent. Turnover in trading in bonds was fairly high at IL50.7m., but was nevertheless exceeded by trading in stocks, which totalled out at IL56m. Traders put most of their money into stocks, with good results being achieved in most nectors. In commercial banks, progress was as usual more sedate

Japan takes various steps to reduce energy consumption

By MARK MURRAY

TOKYO. - Japaneec government ministers at the UNCTAD conference in Manila have been modelling a very snappy line of safari suits.
Government workers, it has been decreed, should go coatless and ticless to the office this summer in the interests of energy conservation. The lead by ministers has a very serious intent. A chut-off of Iranian oil earlier this year set alarm bells ringing in the Tokyo corridors of power. Although the shortfall was made up with spot deals at exorbitant prices (and now with long-term contracts with the new Iranian rulers at a premium), Japan's vulnerability to an energy crisis has rapidly produced an emergency package of oil-saving measuree. Many were merely taken off the shelf from the last oil crisis in 1973: Bars and theatres have been ordered to close carlier, the use of neon signs has been cut and there has been a voluntary reduction in aftermidnight television.

But there are some new touches, including the safari suit uniform for government workers. That is nccessary because the air conditioning in government offices won't be switched on until July 15 two weeks later than usual - and thermostate will be raised from 25 to 28 degrees centigrade, Lighting near windows and the use of elevators will be cut. In winter, the thermostats will be lowered from 20 to 17 degrees. The combination of measures is expected to save around three million is pledged internationally to cut from its consumption by a 5 per cent reduction in energy use.

Private concerns will be asked to follow the government lead voluntarily. The motorist too is heing hit. Petrol stations are asked to close on Sundays and holidays. Government offices will restrict the use of park-ing lots to force its staff and the public to use public transport. Major sports and leisure centres will be asked to restrict parking too.

Petrol rationing is being kept in reserve, although a sudden jump of pricee from under 50 U.S. cents to over 60 cents a litre may discourage non-essential driving anyway.

The government has also revived the drive for a five-day working week, reckoning complete enforcement would save 800,000 kilolitres of oil a year. This could be coupled with plans now under consideration for switching to daylight saving time. The further construction of oilburning power plants has been banned, and coal is back in favour. But the electric power industry says coal will still have to be imported because of the rundown of domestic mines -and the country's extremely tongh anti-pollution laws will make the cost of coal-burning power plants ex-

Aiding the new immigrant

THE MINISTRY for the Absorption of Immigrants was created in 1968 for political reasons which suited the then ruling Labour Party. Previously, there had been complaints against the Jewish Agency for inefficiency and bureaucracy. The new Ministry has been in existence for 11 years, and the complaints have not abated.

The most telling fact recorded in the Horev committee's report on the subject is the following: In 1969, 913 officials dealt with absorption, and the number of immigrants totalled 40,000. In 1976, the number of officials had more than doubled to 1,983 and the number of immigrants had halved to 20,000.

The argument that the Israel Government should bave control of the absorption process is a plece of officialese that has no meaning except to those who think in hureaucratic terms. The Jewish Agency is — does this need to be said? — a Jewish organization, which spends Jewish money on settling Jewish newcomers in the Jewish state. It represents both the people of Israel and the people of the Diaspora.

What difference is there for all practical purposes between a Hebrew-speaking Israeli clerk who sits in the Jewisb Agency building in King George Street, and a Hebrew-speaking Israeli clerk — perhaps the wife of the first clerk — who sits in the Absorption Ministry hullding several hundred metres away?

What the immigrant needs is less offices to deal with, not more. All the functional Ministries — those that control housing. customs, employment, citizenship - are in the hands of the Government anyway, so there is no danger that the institutions of world Jewry should swamp the state of Israel.

The Absorption Ministry should be abolished. A Deputy Director-General ought to he appointed in all the key Ministries - Housing, Treasury, Interior, Agriculture, Education, the Employment Service — to deal with the immigrant — as recommended in the Horev report. They should form, together with the Jewish Agency Executive, a coordinating committee. Every new arrival should have one named Jewish Agency of ficial in charge of his entire absorption process from start to finish. These officials should he held accountable for the successful settlement of the people on their list. Complaints from the immigrants should be channelled to a special Ombudsman. He should be entitled to recommend the dismissal of any official who is palpably inefficient, or who antagonizes the immigrants in his care. The problem of aiding the new settler has been made complex, it needs a simple solution. The Begin Government set itself to diminish the number of Cabinet portfolios. It was sometimes over-zealous, such as in merging tourism into the Ministry of In-

The merger of the Absorption Ministry back into the Jewish Agency will cause few regrets. The Prime Minister himself favours this decision. It is difficult to understand why he does not over-rule the recalcitrant colleagues in his party and apply

Limits on protest

THERE: WERE reports last wight that the police would be ordered to move in today to remove the paraplegic invalids who have been occupying and paralyzing the Finance Ministry in Jerusalem for the past two weeks and purposely obstructing traffic on the capital's approach roads. If the police are ordered in to put an end to the escalating violence in the invalids' demands for more financial assistance, they should be assured that they will have widespread public

One understandahly wincee at the mere thought of resorting even to a modicum of force against men and women who have been the victims of a cruel fate since birth. But there are always limits heyond which any society must overcome even such misgivings. There can be little doubt that the invalids who have run wild in the treasury for the past two weeks have overstepped those limits, by far. In fact, their resorting to the shameful tactics they have used in their protest has in all likelihood lost them their battle in the

It is essential that the government not hesitate any longer in putting an end to thie demonstration. For walting in the wings are potential wild-eyed leaders of other pressure groupe who are just walting for the first sign of the treasury's loosening of its grip on the purse strings to push their own demands for government largesse.

Not only should the police be ordered to put an end to the invalide' frenzied rampage, it is equally essential that the invalids be given a clear No for the precent as an answer to their substantive demands.

There may well be some, or even much, merit to these demands, but knuckling under to pressure is no way for any government to decide on the disbursement of benefits mounting up to hundreds of millions of pounds. The aged and infirm, the mentally retarded, war invalids, and other invallds who are incapable of supporting themselves at ail, as opposed to the demonstrators who all earn a living, ali have meritorious clalms. All of these claime however, must be weighed within the cruel but unavoidable limits which any eociety must put on aid to its less fortunate members. The protesters won far reaching concessions after similar proteets last year in an agreement which still has more than a year to run. It is essential that the protesting invalids be seen to iose their present battle as a lesson to others who are itching to resort to violence in their public battles. The government, in rejecting their claime, ebould make it clear that it will be ready to entertain them only when the present agreement rune out.

THE POLITICS OF INFLATION

The Post's DAVID KRIVINE says that the lesson to be derived from Israel's economic situation is that it is futile to attempt to reduce inflation: what must be done is to "break" inflation.

FINANCE Minister Simha Ehrlich eays that wage hikes cause inflation.

His chief economic planner, Prof. Assaf Razin, eays they do not. It is not europising that the public is confused about economic policy. Experts are getting a bad reputa-tion. They use their specialist verhiage to tie everybody in knots. Who is speaking the truth about the impact of wages on prices, Ehrlich or Razin?

The answer is, both of them. Wage hikes hy themselves do not cause in-flation, so Razin is right in what he says. But corrective measures are repeatedly taken by the authorities to prevent the wage increase from hurting anyone in particular — and that is inflationary. Let us suppose that a general wage rise has been wrung out of the economy. That puts up costs, necessitating more working capital. If the Bank of Israel ohligingly provides that working capital hy ex-panding credit, it can be said that the wage rise has caused inflation.

Razin'e point is that inflation is caused not by the actual wage rise but by its after-effect: the government'e decision to expand the means of payment. It sounds like a piay on words, but it is not. "Printing" money permits a continuation of the inflationary status quo. Costs go up, but they can be happily passed on to the consumer in the form of higher pricee, eince purchasingpower has been allowed to go up as well (thanks to the expansion of credit). And so the spiral is given another twist. That is the world we

THE SAME process happens in the public eector. The government budgets for a small wage growth, but the civil eervants have other ideas. After a series of prolonged wage disputes, they eccure a rise costing (net of tax) bundreds of million pounds.

The government promptly makes tbe extra money available although it has not collected the extra revenue. It just "prints" more than before. Inflation is caused not by the wage increase, but by the weakness of the authorities in letting the ealary increase take place without any particular person or particular eector having to suffer for

Who peys, then, at the end of the day eince for every plus there must be a minus comewhere? The country pays - through inflation. Inflation makes the country poorer in one of two ways. If it pushes prices up more than incomes, then everybody's spending power is cut (and it is the poorest who are hit the hardest). Or else the wage rise could he a real one, with incomee rising mere than prices; in which case the trade deficit will widen, and the nation's foreign deht will widen with it.

The government could stop the rot hy preventing the wage rise from oc-curring in the first place. Even if it does yield to the pressure of strikes, all is not lost, as Razin and his fellow economists point out. It is not obliged to compound that ain by printing the extra money. Britain's new premier, Margaret Thatcher, is against government interference in wage negotiations. What the government ehould do, in her view, is control the money supply.

What would happen then? If the empleyers cannot afferd to pay more wages than before (because movey is hard to get), they will have the choice of revoking the wage rise, or reducing the scale of their activities, which means firing workers. This is happening today in El Al. Faced with mounting losses, the airline has no option but to cancel its flights to Mexico; and perhaps not only to Mexico. In the long run (if the Accountant-General does not come to the rescue with a spot of deficit financing). El Al will pay for the extra wages it gave out, consequent on the income tax reform of 1975, by reducing the number of staff it

ANOTHER cause of confusion in the public'e mind is the Treasury's practice of fighting inflation by upping prices. No cooner are we told that the index this year is going up by a calamitous 60 per cent than we learn that the Treasury bas upped bus faree and postal charges. Doee that not aggravate inflation? What sense is there in combating high prices by raising prices further? The answer to that riddle can be found in the definition of the word "inflation." Webster'e dictionary says it means "an increase in the volume of money and credit relative to available goods, resulting in a sub-stantial and continuing rise in the general price levei." The key word is "continuing."

Inflation takes place when prices keep oo rising, and that happens when, to use the familiar dictum, too much money chases too few goods. The government can stop inflation, as said above, by decreasing the amount of money that does the chasing. One way to do that is hy collecting more taxes — provided always that the government "freezes" the money after collecting it, and does not pump it right back into circulation, via its proclivity for epending

Money can he collected hy augmenting the Value Added Tax, or hy charging more for government services. All that will have the effect of putting prices up - but once only. It does not engender a "continuing" price rise, or price spiral.

THERE IS a case for hoisting pricee as a way of halting price inflation, provided it is really halted. But if the measuree adopted are insufficient to 'break' inflation (Razin'e word), then the price hike might make things worse instead of better. If the epiral is not genuinely arrested, then putting up the price of government services could have the opposite effect. It could accelerate price inflation — owing to the unique system of linkagee developed in Israel.

The linkage system is good, in that it inuree everybody to the ravages of price inflation. But it has a negative effect in that it perpetuates inflation. It acts as a kind of magnifying-giass. If postal charges and bus fares go up, that will be reflected in the index, and then wages will go up. So will the price of government bonds and the size of the national debt, all this multiplying the impact of the original

That le why Ehrlich is reluctant to adopt Razin'e recommendation to in-crease VAT. Yet he cannot ignore

FOREIGN WORKERS FOR ISRAEL NATIONAL SERVICE AND ADMISSION

To the Editor of The Jerusale m Post

1. The proposed foreign, obviously non-Jewieh, workere will presumably stay in Israei for at least three years and are bound to mix with the local populatioo. Will they not almost inevitably leave the same impact ae, for example, the Americane left in Vietnam and Europe and elsewhere? Ie the demographic picture already not sufficiently precarious without inviting this added danger of assimilation and a cadre of "foreign" children? 2. At a time like the present, when all Zionist attention is focused on

There must be thousands of such Jewish workers - ekilled and unskilled who would jump at an opportunity to come to Israel for a guaranteed work contract (and housing) for three, years. TO UNIVERSITY To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir. - Girls who have not done some form of national service chould oot be admitted to the universities. This is my personal opinion based upon the following reasons:

1. Universities should not admit those who have not served the national good in some way.

a) Admission of these girle is clearly unfairly favourable and rewarding to them since it permits them to pursue studies and academic degrees while their compatriots are giving years to national eervice.

b) By admitting these girls, the universities are aiding and abetting those who avoid serving and are thereby collaborating in the shirking of national obligations. c) Legitimate criteria for granting university admission bave aiways included considerations hased on character and experience in addition to academic performance. d) Among the deelred and legitimate goals of a university education . is that of good the upward pressures altogether. It is not feasible to keep the price of government services down forever. If the index soars by 60 per cent and the cost of posting a letter remains II.1.10 (as was the case until the end of last month), then the real cost of posting a letter will have dropped, which means that the Treasury will have started to subsidize the postal evstem, which is absurd. There ie a leseon to be derived from all this. The proper way to tackle inflation in Iarael is really to

"hreak" it. Tampering with it does not help, it could even make things woree. Some forward-looking members of the Likud are urging

Ehrlich to be boider, to double his budget cut from ILS.3b. to IL7b. It is easier said than done. Knes

Member Katzav and Labou Minister Katz stated over the radia on Saturday that social service must be improved for the under privileged, otherwise Katzav may leave the Likud and Katz may resig his ministerial post.

Thie explains wby cconomi problems are so persistent, intractable, almost insoluble, Economic policy is affected less by the reason ing of the economists than by the precence inflicted on, and the decisions taken by, the politicians.
